FUNERAL ORATION

ON THE

DEATH OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN,

DELIVERED BEFORE

THE MAYOR, CITY COUNCIL, AND CITIZENS OF PORTLAND,

APRIL 19th, 1865,

By Rev. J. J. Carruthers, D. D.

Mr. Mayor and Fellow-Citizens:

The memorable days of our republic are multiplying with marvellous rapidity—and, amongst the most memorable of them all, will be the fourteenth of April, eighteen hundred and sixty-five, when the hand of violence fell fatally on all that was mortal of ABRAHAM LINCOLN. The dreadful tragedy—more dreadful than any ever represented in the mimicry of the dramatic stage—has sent a thrill of unmitigated horror through the land; and anguish, paralleled only by the sorest domestic grief, has filled the hearts and households of our nation. The second Father of his country—second, only because he was not the first—has fallen; and, in common with many millions of afflicted mourners, we are met to pay the last tribute of respect to the memory of one whose death is felt by each of all these millions as a personal bereavement. The stroke has fallen unexpectedly and suddenly upon us, but suddenly and unexpectedly only because it is not given to us to foresee the events and issues even of a single day.—Divine benevolence and wisdom have thrown over even the nearest future, a curtain so impenetrable; that human sagacity, however trained and tutored by experience, can but conjecture as to what lies behind it. To God himself nothing is unknown. He "seeth the end from the beginning, and from ancient times the thing that is not yet done." Nor must we withhold the closing part of this inspired declaration, in which he says "My counsel shall stand, and I will do all my pleasure." Without impairing in the least the free agency of man, without mitigating in the least the guilt or just desert of human crime, the Sovereign Ruler of the Universe is ever working out to their designed issues, his purposes of judgment and of mercy. ABRAHAM LINCOLN was "immortal till his work was done;" and, though his purposes were broken off, even the thoughts of his heart, by the hand of the assassin, those of the All-wise and the Almighty are undistarbed and undiverted even by a catastrophe like this. It was in subserviency to His designs, that ABRAHAM LINCOLN first saw the light, and was born with qualities, physical and mental, which—when matured by exercise, observation, and experience, fitted him for the high position he ultimately reached, and for the solemn responsibilities that ever invest the Chief Magistracy of this great republic. He who drew the deliverer of Israel from the bulrushes of the Nile, and trained him for his destiny in the Wilderness of Midian, took ABRAHAM LINCOLN, in his seventh year, from his birthplace in Kentucky, and, till his twentieth, kept him in salutary seclusion amidst the trees dense forests of Indiana. Here, his naturally strong and stalwart frame gained daily vigor from the work to which penury impelled and honest industry inclined him. Here, too, his mental faculties were developed and disciplined by the study of men rather than of books, although of books he had the best in that volume which, beyond all others, yields the most nutritious intellectual aliment, and has, in all ages, given instrumentally the greatest moral heroes to the world. Of these, the Pioneer of Indiana was pre eminently one, and the keen acumen, the unaffected earnestness, the filial fidelity, the untiring industry, the ever unslaked thirst of knowledge, the unimpeached and unimpeachable truthfulness of ABRAHAM LINCOLN, were, in no small degree, the natural results of early conversance with the lives and acts and utterances of Patriarchs and Prophets and Apostles. No College claims him as its alumnus. His Alma Mater was fixed by Providence amidst the woods and waters of the then far-West. His days were spent in hard and ill-remunerating toil, and few indeed were the hours that could be spared for what is called intellectual improvement. But what was wanting in classical learning, in philosophical research, in scientific acquisitions, was more than counterbalanced by the reflex action of his own mind, by the close study of his country's history, and by the stern necessities of a life admitting of no idleness, and by the dictates of a moral dignity that would not stoop to dissipation.—In another and a higher sense than is usually attached to such an epithet, ABRAHAM LINCOLN was a learned man. When he moved from Indiana to his adopted State of Illinois, he largely knew himself. He knew, by close and careful study, the character of Washington. He knew the constitutional history of his own country, and—best of all—he knew and revered those high and holy principles of right and justice which had come to him in his forest home, with the seal and stamp of divine authority. These principles were incorporated with his mental being—interwoven and blended with his daily thoughts—giving steadiness and direction to the noble ambition that sought eagerly to honor and to serve his country.

True greatness is never unallied with modesty; but modesty in him was something else, and something vastly better than that mawkish, mopish shamfacedness, which affects a sense of inferiority that is not felt, and creeps and cringes for compliments that are not deserved. When summoned by the citizens of Illinois to represent them in their legislature, he accepted the office as one to which he was consciously equal, and the responsibilities of which, he assumed as entirely coincident with his ability and inclination. He yielded, with graceful dignity and just confidence in his capacities of counsel and of action, to the appointment of his fellow citizens as a member of the Convention that nominated Zachary Taylor, as a candidate for the Presidential chair. When those citizens accorded him the higher honor of acting as their representative in Congress, he went as naturally and gracefully to his work, as in his boyhood he did his mother's bidding, and in his early manhood followed his father to the forest. He took his Congressional seat as a workman not needing to be ashamed. He had no aspirations towards mere orational display. For this he was not fitted, and he knew it, but, in a way not less if not more effective, by acting on important committees, he served the interests of his constituents, and of the country, and justified to the full the confidence reposed in him. He did not in mock modesty shrink subsequently from contesting with an able Senator, a seat in the higher branch of our national legislature, although in the well fought field of friendly emulation, he failed, as any man, with even more ability than he as a debater, would, in like circumstances, certainly have done. "The battle," in such cases, "is not always to the strong"—and even Illinois was not yet prepared for the position he then boldly assumed, and ever after resolutely maintained, as the advocate of human rights and the earnest friend of the oppressed. But that memorable and prolonged debate did something towards facilitating the education of the people in the science of right doing—and it had the effect, besides, of teaching them that, if they should ever want a man of courage, resolution, unswerving honesty and untiring zeal, to navigate the Ship of State through narrow straits and over tempestuous seas, the required helmsman might be found in Springfield, Illinois.

He was found there. He was entrusted with the mighty enterprise, and nobly has he done his duty. Even he, indeed, with all his natural sagacity and acquired knowledge of measures and men, but partially understood the magnitude of the task he undertook, and, yet, when this was fully seen, when the whole danger and the whole duty opened to his view, this noble man shrunk not, quailed not, nor ever once betrayed the slightest distrust in the successful issue of the fearful struggle. With a depleted treasury—with a fleet insignificantly small, and scattered systematically to the ends of the earth—with the army scarcely more than nominally such—with treason stalking at midday even in the Capital—with half the States in armed insurrection—with disloyal officers, by scores, transferring their allegiance to the rebel flag—and with volunteer forces wholly inadequate in numbers to meet the domestic foe,—this man of moral might stood firm at his post with undiverted eye, with steady hand, and with a heart ever confident in God and in the right.

It would be doing great injustice, however, to his memory, did we not record it to his honor that, from first to last of his official career, he never momentarily forgot that he was President of a Republic. The one-man power found in him neither advocacy nor illustration. He rose from amongst the people, and ruled by the people's will, and for the people's benefit. He skilfully surrounded himself with men of tried and tested patriotism, and if any one of them, however personally esteemed, proved untrue to his prestige or unequal to his post, he was forthwith and unceremoniously set aside. He had no petty jealousy of obtrusion, by his chosen and trusted associates, on his prerogatives of office; but cheerfully shared with each and all of them the honors as well as the duties of the government. Though, at first, supposed by some to have too little independence of thought and action, and too easily induced to adopt opinions and measures not wholly accordant with personal convictions, experience effectually corrected this erroneous estimate of the noble man, and taught all other men that ABRAHAM LINCOLN had his own individual conscience, and was guided by it. By slow degrees of popular enlightenment and the surest proofs of administrative wisdom, it became apparent to the most obtuse observer that, though he was neither the commander nor the creature of his cabinet, he had a will of his own, and and would yield it only to conviction or to the force of circumstances not to be controlled. The plastic ease with which he met the exigencies of each occasion as it rose, the bland and genial courtesy which made every man approaching him feel perfectly at home, the winning smile that came like the sparkling ebullition of a natural fountain, from the deep recesses of a loving heart, were found, by manifold experiments, to be combined with a courage that no danger could intimidate, a constancy which no vicissitude could shake, a confidence that rested on no precarious or problematic basis, but on the solid and immutable principles of truth and justice. From these principles no force of adverse reasoning could remove him, and no fulsome adulation could seduce him. Even the wisest of his counsellors knew full well from the beginning, and the enemies of equity learnt to their hearts' content, that ABRAHAM LINCOLN, in his panoply of honesty, was proof against all attempts to gain him over even to a seeming recognition of constructive falsehood, or the practical adoption of a treacherous expediency.

The Constitution of our country, as expounded by the greatest jurist of modern times, and as understood by many of the most intelligent lovers of their country and mankind, seemed at least to admit of such construction, as was favorable to a system of iniquitous oppression. By guarding jealously the rights of States, it appeared to place this system, as such, beyond the jurisdiction of the Union, and leave to this, as its only legitimate sphere in that direction, the power of confining within or extending beyond actual State organizations, the great crime and grievous curse of human bondage. There can be no doubt that ABRAHAM LINCOLN so interpretated his oath of office, as to feel himself bound, in honor and justice, to abstain from influencing by any act of power, the legislation or executive action of any of the States when seen to be, or seeming to be strictly constitutional. Then conscience and constitution were at variance; but as he had sworn to maintain the latter, conscience demanded a rigid adherance to his oath. He did adhere to it—and it was in perfect accordance with the spirit and terms of that oath that, when a military necessity arose for his intervention, as Commander in Chief in the way of liberating a portion of the colored people of the land, he embraced the providential opportunity, and sent forth that glorious proclamation of emancipation which alone would have immortalize his name.

A military necessity was the immediate occasion of that measure; but there are other necessities higher, holier, and at il more imperative, necessities to which the demon-power of slavery must succumb—necessities, involved in the principles of God's word, admonitions interwoven with the instincts of humanity, and demanding with an authority that calls heaven and earth to witness, in these days of civil commotion and convulsion, the expulsion of the Slave holding demon from the body politic, and an interdict strong, enduring and irrevocable against its return. That interdict will soon be pronounced by the American people and the imperishable record of the amended Constitution be embodied in the epitaph of our late noble President.

We have said that ABRAHAM LINCOLN could not die before his work was done. His work was done. Beautifully symmetrical as were the intellectual and moral qualities by which he was distinguished, it is no disparagement of the man or of the ruler to say that he could not have met, as another may, the solemn responsibilities of the crisis at which as a nation we have now arrived. That heart of love was not to be trusted with the work of dealing with the authors and abettors of gigantic treason. Himself so absolutely free from guile, he was but ill qualified to look through those disguises by which wicked men conceal their deep designs, and when these designs are thwarted—put on an air of ingenious regret, and even of injured innocence. That recent visit of our noble chief to Richmond, which many lamented, and not a few feared might lead to a catastrophe like that which has filled the land with mourning—that visit, with its immediate and possible results, may reconcile us to an event in itself most deplorable and sad, but, in its issues, not incompatible with the honor, safety, and well-being of the nation. We sympathize most deeply and sincerely in their affliction with the widow and the orphan sons of our great and good chief magistrate. We estimate, at its highest worth the homage paid this day, through the whole land, to his distinguished virtues; but we will not, even at the tomb of ABRAHAM LINCOLN, "despair of the Republic." Despair! The very whisper of despair might reanimate that corpse which has this day been carried to the tomb, might reopen those meek and lustrous eyes, dispart those lips of mildness and decision and draw forth a withering rebuke of the godless unbelief and craven cowardice that could despair of a republic such as ours. No man, however great, however good, is essential to the welfare of our country. He who gave us this great Chief, can give us—has already given us another who will meet the responsibilities of a trust so suddenly and solemnly imposed upon him. He cannot yet divide with his lamented predecessor the love and homage of his fellow citizens, but he is sure to gain them, if the practical pledges of his past life shall be redeemed, and if the incipient promise of his administration shall be verified by its progressive development and prospective issues. Let us not then dishonor the memory of him whom we so sincerely mourn, by questioning the future stability of our institutions, the progress of civilization through the entire undivided land, the moral greatness of a nation emerging, in athletic vigor, from a furnace that would have consumed any other, the glorious moral destiny of a people set for the defence and the diffusion, through the world, of rational liberty, secured by the unfailing guarantees of high intelligence, mutual forbearance, and unaffected piety. We bid a long farewell to the man whom we this day honor, we follow, in imagination, his remains with the retinue of domestic and public mourners to its temporary depository and thence again to the place of final sepulture; but we will not forget, amidst our personal sorrow and sympathetic grief, that our nation holds its life by a higher tenure than that of frail mortality and that, whatever rulers rise or fall,

"IN GOD WE TRUST."

This company proposes to develop a property upon what is known as the MUTUAL PLAIN. The leading feature of which is that every subscriber enters upon the "Ground Floor," as it is called, whereby every one shares in proportion to the amount of his stock in all the property and profits of the company. The stock is placed at the very Low Price of 25 cts. per share, that all, both rich and poor, may be induced to share in an enterprise which promises to yield for a Small Outlay Immense Returns.

The land, which is a tract of Forty (40) Acres, covers two branches of the now famous Oil Spring Run, in Morgan County, Ohio, with sufficient boring (and for one Hundred (100) Wells. All the property is in Fee Simple, by which the company will have a great advantage over those who pay Royalty, amounting in some cases to Twenty-Five per cent. of their entire product.

In the immediate vicinity and adjoining the property, there are four flourishing companies, which have said to be producing large quantities of Lubricating Oil, which sells for twenty five dollars per barrel at the well, viz: the Manta Oil Co of Philadelphia; the Muskingham Oil Spring Co of New York; Muskingham Petroleum Co o Pittsburg; and the Oil Spring Run Co o Philadelphia.

The Muskingham River, which is navigable eleven months in the year, is only one and a half miles from the property and affords the most convenient means of taking the product to market. It is earnestly recommended that Farmers, or others, having horses for sale, present them to the undersigned in person, as they will obtain a better price for their animals than if they sold them to speculators travelling through the country without any authority, and who make one sole object is to make money, and who have not the interest of the service at heart. The Celebration at Fort Sumter.

The thrilling events of the past few days has rendered all else tame and tasteless. The celebration at Fort Sumter and the Fall of Mobile—either of them sufficient in ordinary times to thrill the national system in every fibre and nerve of its being—have fallen stillborn upon the public mind. It may be proper, however, to gather up a few incidents connected with the restoration of the flag at Sumter, though our space will not allow of the extended account of that affair. We condense from the letter-writers.

The celebration was held on Friday, April 14. Large numbers of people had been attracted to the spot. The identical flag that was lowered four years ago was raised with appropriate ceremonies. At an early hour the note of preparation was sounded. Salutes of artillery were fired, and every vessel in the harbor put on its gayest attire. The naval display excited the liveliest admiration. Every gunboat and monitor was dressed with a profusion of bunting. The national ensign floated from all the principal fortifications, with the exception of Sumter, where was shortly to take place a scene never to be forgotten.

The whole forenoon was occupied in transporting the immense number of visitors to Sumter, which was entered to the northeast side by a flight of wooden steps, leading to the demolished parapet facing Charleston, which portion of the fort is the best preserved externally. The remainder is but a mass of debris, composed of concrete, brick and sand, in which was imbedded tons of iron missiles, thrown during the terrible conflict that treason evolved.

It was not until noon that the last landing was completed. Standing on the crumbled, demolished parapet, overlooking the dense crowd assembled in the parade ground, and viewing the fleet of gunboats, monitors and steamers lying but a short distance off, dressed in their brilliant regalia, the scene was beyond the touch of the painters pencil.

In the centre of the parade ground was the stand from which Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, the orator of the day, was to deliver his address. It was a slightly elevated platform, enclosed with boughs of myrtle, standing underneath a temple of liberty, festooned and entwined with bunting and wreaths of flowers.

Dr. Mackey, of Charleston, the eminent Free Mason, who has never swerved from his fealty to the government during the trying hours of the rebellion, was present with his wife and two daughters. The wife and children of Gen. Anderson and the daughter of Gen. Dix were also on the stand.

It is estimated that at least three thousand people were present, one-sixth being ladies. There were also large detachments of white and colored troops, marines and sailors, serving as guards of honor

Massachusetts was represented by the 54th colored regiment, whose gallant and noble Colonel lies in a hero's grave on the shores of Morris Island.

The ceremonies of the occasion commenced with the singing of a song and chorus entitled "Victory at Last!" which was received with rapturous applause. Then followed the reading of a portion of Scripture by the venerable Chaplain Harris of the United States Army, (who made the prayer at the raising of the flag when Major Andersen removed his command from Fort Moultrie to Fort Sumter, December 27, 1860,) followed by a fervent and impressive prayer, by the same gentleman, during which the utmost silence was observed. Rev. Dr. Storrs, Jr., of New York, then read the hundred and twenty-sixth, forty-seventh, ninety-eighth, and part of the twentieth Psalms—in the reading of the last of which he was joined by the assembly. Adjutant General Townsend then in a clear voice read Major Anderson's dispatches, dated "Steamship Baltic, off Sandy Hook, April 18, 1861," announcing the fall of Fort Sumter.

Preparations were now made for hoisting the flag, which was no sooner brought to view than there was aroused a burst of joy. A few moments and everything was in readiness. Stepping forward, Gen. Anderson, on whom devolved the pleasurable duty of restoring to its original place on the fort the identical flag which, after an honorable and gallant defense, he was compelled to lower to the insurgents, made the following remarks:

"I am here, my friends and fellow citizens and brother soldiers, to perform an act of duty which is dear to my heart, and which all of you present appreciate and feel. Did I listen to the promptings of my own heart, I would not attempt to speak; but I have been desired by the Secretary of War to make a few remarks. By the considerate appointment of the honored Secretary of War, I am privileged to fulfil the cherished wish of my heart through four long years of bloody war, to restore to its proper place this very flag which floated here during peace before the first act of this cruel rebellion. Thank God, I have lived to see this day! (applause,) that I have lived to be here to perform this, perhaps, the last act of duty to my country in this life. My heart is filled with gratitude to Almighty God for the signal blessings which he has given us—blessings beyond number. May all the world proclaim—"Glory to God in the highest! on earth peace and good will to men!"

On the conclusion of his remarks he seized the halliards and with a firm and steady pull ran aloft the old flag. No sooner had it caught the breeze than there was one tumultuous shout. It was an inspiring moment—grand and sublime—never to be experienced again. "Our flag was there"—its crimson folds, tattered but not dishonored, regenerated and baptised anew in the fires of liberty.

Previous to the raising of the flag the steamer Planter, Capt. Robert Small, who, it will be remembered, run the rebel gauntlet in 1862, came to the fort loaded down with between 2000 and 3000 of the emancipated race, of all ages and sizes. Their appearance was warmly welcomed. Capt. Small was subsequently introduced to many distinguished gentlemen, to whom he narrated his interesting adventure with lively satisfaction.

Rev. Henry Ward Beecher then delivered an appropriate address, which has been published in full. They who have read it generally concur in the judgment that it did not rise to the level of Mr. Beecher's ordinary efforts.

The day following the celebration, a meeting was held in Charleston in behalf of the Freedmen, which was addressed by Wm. Lloyd Garrison, George Thompson, Mr. Beecher, Senator Wilson, and others. The world moves.

Voice of the Rebel Prisoners.

While the rebel leaders deserve and are like to receive a just recompense for their treason and iniquity, the common people and the common soldiery have little of their feeling, and will be held accountable for none of their sins. As an indication of the spirit of the rebel soldiers, we copy the following recent dispatch from Washington:

"On Monday the rebel prisoners at Point Lookout, through their sergeants of divisions, passed resolutions representing the voice of 22,000 rebel prisoners, expressing their abhorrence of the assassination of the late President and their warm sympathy with his distressed family. The resolutions were to be sent to the War Department through General Barnes, the commandant at Point Lookout.

Letter from Boston.

BOSTON, April 19, 1865.

To the Editor of the Press:

"Hung be the heavens with black," for the bells are tolling the obsequies of "the noblest man that ever lived in the tide of the times." No tongue can portray the crushing grief of this people, met to-day to pay their last poor tribute to one so honored and beloved.

When the dreadful tidings came to us upon Saturday morning, the first common impulse was that of indignant exasperation and vengeance against the fiendish authors of all our woes; but later, when the bells began to toll, and the flags to be placed at half mast, telling that our Chief Magistrate was indeed dead, rage and indignation sunk down into a heart-broken grief, and strong men sat down and wept like helpless, fatherless children. Even those who were never known to speak a word of commendation or kindness of the President, but were continually finding fault with all his acts, grieved like the orphan children of a tender and abused parent. All places of business were immediately closed and draped in emblems of mourning.

It is no common blow, like the clouding of our national prospects—it is a personal bereavement to every heart. Men, with pallid faces and tremulous accents, say: "I have lost many dear friends, but it was nothing to this." "We did not know how much we loved him until now." Insensibly he had twined himself about every heart, with the closest ties of a tender and living affection.

Sprung from the obscurest and humblest of the community, ever walking in a meek and self-forgetful path of duty, his life was a meet preparation for the best understanding of the popular wants of a great Republic.

Like Moses, he listened to the voice of the Lord, calling upon him to lead his people out of the depths of bondage, coming to the head of a nation, with a simple trust in the pillar and cloud, growing into the full stature of a wise and faultless leader, living above all human weakness of pride or passion, passing through the Red Sea of carnage, with a steadfast boldness that surprised the world, still pitying, patient and loving, holding fast by his watchword of duty and right, standing at last upon Mount Nebo and pointing to his people with a glad thankfulness the glories of the promised land, falling at last a common martyr with the thousands who have given their lives that a nation might live—looking back upon this grand and perfect life, his wonderful labors, unerring wisdom, immovable serenity and composure amid the severest calamities, his freedom from human passion, we are lost in admiration, and can only say: "This man was led of God."

Of the authors of this foul and unnatural murder, this fiendish consummation of all the blackest villanies ever hatched in the scorpion nest of slavery, we can say nothing. No human power can punish such crimes. "Vengeance is mine," saith the Lord, "I will repay. We leave them to His justice, fervently praying that He has resources of punishment meet for such crimes.

Let Rebellion tremble before our Joshua, who dips his hands in this sacred blood, and tells us, in brief, but weighty accents, that the greatest of all crimes is treason. We still have an able and fearless leader, less meek and merciful, it may be, but still able to lead us safely into the haven of peace.

Well may we mourn for our beloved, for he loved us well. Each man has lost a friend and a brother. But One has said, "Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted." So let us take comfort and be thankful that God gave to us, for a little season, such a rich and abundant blessing as the life and labors and example of this great and good man, who has at last given us a full and perfect example of the precepts of the holy Jesus who said: "Love your enemies; bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you; and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." Even so he did, and was slain at their hands.

In the past week the Great Ruler has seen fit to give us the greatest joy and the heaviest sorrow ever borne by this nation. Baptised in such affliction, washed in the blood of martyrs, shall we not come forth, purified and redeemed, a chosen people, meet to bear the ark of the Lord?

To-day our citizens have done what they could to pay appropriate and mournful homage to the cherished memory of Abraham Lincoln. All the churches were elaborately draped in mourning, and filled with sorrowful hearts. All wore badges of mourning, and the sad faces gave abundant token of the inward grief. All the banners are draped in black, and the city presents a uniform appearance of gloom. The bells were tolled at twelve, and services held in all the churches; the bells tolled at two; at four a procession was formed and the citizens marched to the Common, while the bands played funeral dirges, and afterwards listened to appropriate addresses from some of our ablest orators.

We sigh for the stirring words of our Everett, to speak the eulogy of our sainted hero; but his work, too, is done. God rest their souls. L. A. B.

Letter from an Agent of the Maine Camp Hospital Association.

CITY POINT, VA., April 14, 1865.

Dear E:—We had a delightful unpacking a few days ago, and I have been endeavoring to write to you ever since but have scarcely time to eat or sleep.

Mrs. Mayhew and Mrs. Sampson went to the front last Saturday, and I have been alone at the Agency since then. The Hospitals are filled with wounded, and surgeons and nurses are overworked. I have dispensed about a hundred dollars worth of stores daily for the last fortnight, and still the calls continue. We shall need all the supplies that can be sent to us for the next three or four weeks, and then I trust the call will be greatly diminished, and soon cease altogether. Our Maine troops have suffered very heavily in all these last battles, but thank Heaven, the fighting is over and we are to have no more wounded men.

Evening. The cars came filled with wounded rebels to night, very bad cases; to-morrow the remainder of ours will be brought down from the front. We shall need more woolen shirts, drawers and socks. We also need money to buy fresh eggs, lemons and oranges. Send all that you can, and as fast as you can for the next few weeks. Sheets, pillow-cases, pillows, arm-slings, bandages, pads, old cloth, slippers, canned peaches, cucumber pickles, brandy, sherry and domestic wines; those are what we need now.

10 o'clock P. M. Have just returned from the bedside of a soldier with an amputated leg. The nurses thought him dying and sent for me. I found him very low but not dying. I have done all I could to leave him, but I fear in vain. He needed a man to take special care of him, and after hunting through the hospital in vain, and making several very unmilitary requests, I applied to Capt. Mayo of the 3d Me. Battery who immediately sent me just such an one as was needed, who will watch over him day and night and attend to all his wants. That ward was gloomy to-night, filled with wounded men, groaning with pain.

I am deeply thankful for our victory, but my heart is heavy with the sight of all this suffering. I know that this is the most remarkable day the world has ever seen.—That it is the beginning of a new era; the lifting up of the whole human race into a brighter and holier light. But at what a price of agony it is purchased. We owe the soldiers a debt which can never be repaid. For our sakes they have passed through a thousand martyrdoms. Everywhere they have suffered and in countless ways. Let us do what we can for them. Let us not rest until we have done everything in our power to make them comfortable. Let every citizen manifest his or her gratitude by sending stores or money to them. There is no danger of an over supply. Let those who have wrought in this vineyard work with renewed zeal, and those who have done nothing hasten to lend a helping hand. Give! Give! Give! this is our cry from the wards of the wounded, suffering, mutilated heroes. Let a grateful people pour out their treasures at their feet, send to us that we may bind up their wounds, pouring on oil and wine. R.

In view of the pressing needs at City Point we are compelled to ask that a contribution should be taken in the several churches on Sunday 23d, for the Me. Camp Hospital Association. Per Order.

Tribute to a Gallant Soldier.

CORNISH, April 13, 1865.

To the Editor of the Press:

In the fall of 1861, he and his brother Albion were at school at Limerick Academy. Coming home of a Saturday they first heard of the formation of a company, under their townsman, Capt. Wedgwood. Their young hearts were fired with the thought of joining with their many friends under such a leader. Meeting Levi Stone, Jr., John F. Stone, Calvin Pugsley and Albion Parker, their near neighbors, they communicated with them, and after a consultation with their parents and friends, they all agreed to enlist; at the same time entering into a solemn pledge each with the others, if any of their number should fall, their bodies should be borne back to have a burial in their native town. Early the next Monday morning the sensation produced in our village at the appearance of these six young men for the object avowed, will not soon be forgotten. So young, so promising—the pride and hope of the place—their unsolicited, unlooked-for enlistments excited the surprise and admiration of all, and their destinies have been watched with interest. They left the next day with their company full, joined the 9th Regiment, and were soon assigned to the expedition for Hilton Head. In their two years' service in that department, the climate and hardships of the service proved fatal to his brother, and Pugsley and Parker. They were discharged, and reached home only to die and be buried where they wished, and by those they loved so well. L. Stone, Jr., reinlisted and is still in the service. His brother John has an appointment of Hospital Steward in the regular army.

The subject of this notice reinlisted and was taken prisoner at the assault on Fort Gilmore, on the 29th of Sept. last; was first incarcerated in the Libby prison, then at Belle Isle, and from thence in Salisbury, where after five months' endurance of most barbarous privations and cruelties, he was finally paroled and reached his home on the 21st of March last, with just strength enough to tell the shocking story of his sufferings and then to lie down and die on the memorable day of Lee's surrender.

He was engaged in sixteen assaults and battles, in all of which he bore himself manfully. For his gallantry and meritorious service he was promoted from Corporal to a Lieutenancy, and a commission was issued about the time of his capture.

His officers and comrades have ever borne testimony to his correct deportment, his patient endurance and unflinching courage. His funeral was largely attended, the whole neighborhood seem ing to vie with each other to testify their respect for their heroic young friend, and their sympathy for his parents, who have thus yielded on the altar of their country their two eldest sons, and whose third, a boy of 17, went out with and is now serving in the 30th Regiment. Only one little lad of 14 is now left to aid and comfort them in their declining years. J. J.

Telegraphic News of Thursday.

Government has offered a reward for the apprehension of the assassin Booth, which, with the amount offered by cities, &c., is sufficient to insure his arrest if money were the only inducement to effect his capture. The government offers $50,000, the city of Washington $20,000, the city of Baltimore $10,000, the special agent of the War Department $10,000, Major-General Augur $10,000, making in all $100,000. It is not likely the associates of a person like Booth can resist the temptation of a reward like this, especially if their own personal safety is insured, and we therefore look for the apprehension of the villain very soon. $25,000 is offered for the arrest of each of his known accomplices, and a liberal reward for information which may lead to the arrest of any or all of them. The penalty of death is announced for any one who harbors or aids the assassin in hiding or making his escape.

George A. Atzerot, alias Port Tobacco, one of the accomplices for whom a reward of $25 000 was offered, is reported as arrested and identified by the detectives. He was arrested by Sergeant Cammett of the 1st Delaware Cavalry.

A man suspected of being Booth has been arrested at Tamaqua, Penn., and will be held until identified.

A despatch to the New York Herald states that the notorious Mosby surrendered his force to Gen. Chapman at Berryville, Va., being allowed the same terms that were granted to Gen. Lee.

The capture of Columbus, Ga., by a portion of the command of Gen. Thomas is reported. Some hard fighting took place.

General Auger, by the direction of the Secretary of War, has issued an order prohibiting all those engaged in conducting the investigation of matters connected with the murder of Mr. Lincoln and the assault on Secretary Seward, from divulging any information brought out by their investigations except to the War Department. All persons violating this order will be looked upon as obstructing the prompt arrest of the conspirators and be punished accordingly.

Intelligence from New Orleans, of the 15th, states that cotton is very much depressed; sales of good ordinary at 24c. Gold has declined 5 1-2 per cent. Western produce, dry goods and all staple articles are offered at greatly reduced prices without buyers.

The Louisville Democrat says Major Taylor has been paroled preparatory to his leaving the United States, he refusing to take the oath.

It is rumored in Washington that Charles Francis Adams will be sent for to act as Mr. Seward's successor should he be obliged to resign, while others predict that Mr. Stanton will soon be transferred to the State Department.

SERVED HIM RIGHT.—We understand that in Cornish village, the other day, a notorious rebel-sympathizer went into a store, and in response to a remark in relation to the assassination of President Lincoln, said he was glad of it. The shop-keeper immediately pointed to the door and requested him to leave, which request he refused to comply with, adding insolence to his other bad conduct. The owner of the store then opened his desk, took therefrom a loaded revolver, and said to the scoundrel, "you leave, or I will make it necessary for you to be carried out; and there is no time to be lost about it!" The fellow left; and in going into the street he saw a neighbor in a wagon, a robust, muscular individual, and to him he said—"I think things have come to a pretty pass when a man can't speak his mind." He then related the circumstances of the case, when the robust neighbor, saying not a word, threw his reins over the fender, jumped from his wagon, and gave secesh such a thrashing that he will be likely to remember it for some months to come. The general verdict is—"served him right."

☞ Tammany Hall responded nobly to the shocking crime at Washington, passed resolutions which have the ring of the true metal, and sent a sympathizing delegation to Washington to attend the President's funeral.

☞ The Hallowell Gazette says that a house on Water street, near Currier's Tavern in that city, occupied by a Mr. Quinn, took fire on Wednesday afternoon last, and was nearly destroyed: cause—defect in chimney. The furniture was saved.

☞ A long letter is published in the metropolitan papers, purporting to have been written by Booth, the murderer, but it bears the internal and external evidence of being a hoax. It is perfectly absurd to suppose he would, last November, write such a letter, and entrust it to the keeping, though enveloped and marked "secret," of any person not as deeply involved as himself.

☞ The New York Herald announced our distinguished fellow-citizen, W. P. Fessenden, as one of the speakers at the Wall street meeting in that city on Saturday last. This was a mistake, as Mr. Fessenden was at home in this city at the time. Hon. Samuel C. Fessenden of this State was there, and spoke, and must have spoken well, for the report of his remarks in some of the city papers say that the conclusion of some of his sentences could not be heard by the multitude because of the applause.

☞ The Rockland Free Press re-publishes, in connection with its account of the assassination of President Lincoln, that ugly letter of A. P. Gould to John L. Hunter, dated Oct. 21, 1864, which closes with these ominous words: "But if the Jacobin revolutionists succeed in the coming election, by force and fraud, as they must, if at all, and attempt to carry their principles and purposes into execution, though it may be through much precious blood, the fate of Marat and Robespierre awaits them. A people accustomed to freedom will not long submit to them."

☞ Our neighbor of the Argus disclaims the sophistry that a military parole can screen traitors, however high or infamous, from trial before civil tribunals for the crime of treason. We are glad he admits the sensible doctrine that the civil laws may act unobstructed in punishing gigantic crimes, notwithstanding the immunity given by parole against military arrest and punishment. We certainly did not intend to misrepresent our neighbor, and least of all would we do him injustice while he is manifesting so good a spirit as he has since the surrender of Lee, and particularly during the season of the nation's great bereavement.

☞ It is amusing to note the changed tone of some papers in relation to Andrew Johnson. A few weeks ago they hung their heads in shame and almost called for his impeachment; now they have suddenly discovered that "his intoxication was not the result of habit, and that all through his life he has been temperate and sober." Would they have done this act of justice if Mr. Johnson had not suddenly risen to the highest position of power and influence?—But we will not pen such an ugly question, so suggestive of snobbishness and truckling, but would suggest that is is always well to ascertain facts before dealing too sweepingly with the nation's great and honored men.

☞ The Toronto Globe says: "We should like to ask the friends of Judge Smith two questions. If Booth should escape to Canada, be arrested and brought before Judge Smith, and it should be found that the assassination of Mr. Lincoln was authorized by a Confederate officer, would the judge refuse his extradition, on the ground of the belligerent character of the act? Would he declare that the Ashburton Treaty was abrogated, and refuse to surrender the assassin? We pause for a reply. To our mind there would be as much reason for refusing to give up Booth as the St. Albans raiders, supposing that Booth could prove that he had authority from some officer of the Confederate States to commit the deed, which he probably had.

☞ President Johnson's family resides at present in Nashville, Tennessee, and consists of his wife and four children—two sons and two daughters. His son Robert is twenty-nine, and Andrew Johnson Jr., is twelve years of age.—His two daughters, with their families, also reside in Nashville, having been driven from their homes in Eastern Tennessee. One of Mr. Johnson's sons, Charles, a surgeon in the army, was thrown from his horse in the year 1863, and killed; and Col. Stover, a son-in-law, commanding the 4th regiment of Tennessee infantry, was killed in the battle of Nashville, while gallantly leading his command, on the 18th of December, 1864. Judge Patterson, who is also a son-in-law of the President, lives in Nashville. Mrs. Johnson has been in very delicate health for some time past.

Death of Richard Cobden.

This eminent British statesman has gone down to the tomb. He was the son of a small farmer of Midhurst in Sussex, England, where he was born in 1804. Leaving agricultural for commercial pursuits, he finally settled in Manchester as a cotton printer, and from small beginnings became one of the leading manufacturers of that city. He published several pamphlets upon commercial and political questions before he entered Parliament. In 1841 he entered Parliament and became an eloquent advocate of free trade and one of the most active members of the "anti-corn league." The repeal of the corn laws in 1846 was universally ascribed to his efforts. For these services he was rewarded with a national subscription of £70,000, and in 1846 was elected the representative of the great constituency, of the West Riding of Yorkshire.

Mr. Cobden was a powerful advocate of the general views of the radical party and was regarded as the champion of the manufacturing interests. Upon questions of trade and finance and currency he was high authority.—He was a great advocate of peace measures, and opposed the Russian war and condemned Palmerston's Chinese policy. This made him somewhat unpopular, and he lost his election. He was entirely a self-made man, and while in this county he was returned for Rochdale.—Although he was not so eloquent as his friend John Bright, he was among the ablest debaters in the House of Commons. Our country has occasion to mourn his loss, for he was ever a great friend to us and to republican liberty the world over. His influence was exercised against the rebellion and in favor of sustaining our government. We find that nearly all the European statesmen who arose from the people are the friends of our government, and liberal principles. He has done much to enlighten the people of England in relation to our affairs, and we owe him a great debt of gratitude for the noble works he has done in the cause of Liberty. He will long be remembered by the American people and his labors in behalf of freedom will adorn the pages of history.

EVENING PAPERS.

From Mobile—Official Report of Rear Admiral Thatcher—Capture of Forts Hager and Tracy.

WEST GULF SQUADRON,

SIR:—I have the honor to inform the Department that on Monday, the 10th, subsequent to the capture of Fort Alexis and Spanish Fort, detailed in my dispatch of April 9th, the Octarora, Lieut. Commanding W. W. Low, and the iron-clads were enabled, in consequence of the thorough dragging of Blakely River, to move up the river nearly abreast of Spanish Fort, from which point Commander Low with his rifled guns shelled with great precision Forts Hager and Tracy, and with such effect that both these forts were evacuated on the evening of the 11th, and our forces took possession, capturing a few prisoners in the adjoining marsh. The forts I shall hold until Gen. Canby can garrison them.

This morning I moved with the gunboats conveying the men of Gen. Granger's force to the west side of Mobile Bay. On arrival it was ascertained that the enemy had evacuated all the defences, and retreated with their gunboats up the Alabama River.

The rebel gunboats will unquestionably be captured in a few days unless they are destroyed.

Gen. Granger and myself have just sent into Mobile a formal demand to the Mayor for unconditional surrender, which will undoubtedly be accepted, as the city is now at our mercy. The navy have already hoisted the stars and stripes over the walls of Fort Pinto and Spanish River battery. We also have entire possession of Choctaw Point battery and three heavy forts below it.

I shall place a sufficient number of gunboats directly in front of the city to give sufficient protection to the loyal citizens, of whom I learn there are a great number.

Gen. Canby with the forces under his immediate command, is at present in Blakely. I have constant telegraphic communication with him.

I send this by Lieut. Comd'g J. H. Gillis, whose vessel, the Milwaukee, was destroyed by a torpedo. I subsequently gave him charge of the naval battery on shore, with which he rendered very effective service in shelling Fort Alexis and Spanish Fort. I commend him for zeal and gallantry.

Comd'r Crosby has been untiring in freeing Blakely River of torpedoes, having succeeded in removing over 150, a service demanding coolness, judgment and perseverance.

Your obedient servant,
(Signed) H. R. THATCHER,
Acting Rear Admiral.

To Hon. Gideon Welles, Secretary of the Navy.

The Mexican Empire Collapsing.

NEW YORK, April 21.

The Herald's Paris correspondent says Maximilian's Minister in London has resigned, declaring that he is satisfied the Mexican Empire is collapsing, and that Maximillian will soon abdicate and return to Austria, being completely disappointed in his two most important expectations, the recognition by the United States, and the support of the Pope and Mexican clergy. As a confirmation of this report, it is stated that Maximillian has retracted the renunciation of his family rights to the throne of Austria, made before leaving Europe.

Paroling of Lee's Army Completed.

NEW YORK, April 21.

SPECIAL NOTICES.

To the People of Maine.

The United States Christian Commission organized and conducted by Christian men of high standing in their respective denominations, having the hearty approval of President Lincoln, Secretaries Seward, Stanton and Wells, and Lt. Gen. Grant, Vice Admiral Farragut, and other distinguished officers of the Army and Navy, has in the past three years and a half, accomplished an untold amount of good for our soldiers and sailors, in which our sons and brothers from Maine have been equal sharers with others from all parts of our land.

Its funds—ever small in proportion to the field of labor occupied—having ever relied upon the spontaneous gifts of those who love God, our country and its defenders—never having been swelled by the contribution of a million at a time—are entirely exhausted.

The Delegates of the Commission are now daily meeting hundreds of our poor, sick, starved, returned prisoners, at Aiken's Landing, tenderly supplying all their wants, and accompanying and nursing them on their way home.

This work, with the constant movements of the various armies, gives active employment to nearly three hundred unpaid Delegates.

With the first general battle, that may occur at any moment, a very large outlay for battle-field stores will be required; and unless the present urgent call is promptly and generously met, the men who shall fight these battles, under Grant and Sherman, and achieve for us the final victory, will be without the sympathy and ministrations of the Delegates of the Christian Commission. Shall the "God bless you" of the soldier, "ready to perish," who is saved by aid we send, be ours?

With this statement of its organization and standing, the work it is now doing, and its immediate wants, we most earnestly and heartily commend to the people of Maine this liberal and National Association as a most efficient and economical medium for their contributions to the soldiers and sailors.

Let us who are at home, enjoying the blessings of peace and comfort, not forget those who have been, and are now, purchasing these privileges for us at the risk of their lives; and though we may not be able personally to minister to their wants, let our contributions, carried to them by Christian men, testify to our interest in their behalf. The present prospect is, that there will be a short but terrible conflict before our armies will be triumphant. It may be our brothers and sons will be engaged in it. Let us give, then, liberally to this noble charity, not only from love to our friends, who are exposed to suffering and death, but also from love to our country and the cause of humanity.

The Horrors of Indigestion.

You complain of your stomach, unfortunate dyspeptic; but ought not your stomach to complain of you? Possibly the pangs you endure are simply the stomach's method of taking revenge upon you for neglecting and abusing it. Perhaps you have never made an effort to improve its condition, but on the other hand are continually cramming it with unwholesome and incongruous food. Have you ever tried HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS, a proper diet and regular meals? The Bitters in a week would put your digestive apparatus in perfect order, regulate the flow of bile in accordance with the laws of health, and produce just so much aperient action as would be necessary for your good; and when you were once all right, judicious and regular dieting, with a little of the Tonic now and then, would keep you so. If you have neglected these means of cure, don't blame your stomach for its rebellion. It is merely nature's hint that she wants help. If you neglect it, the next thing may be Inflammation, or Scirrhus Cancer, or some violent and dangerous disease. There is such a thing as being too late in these matters. HOSTETTER'S BITTERS will cure Dyspepsia; but Dyspepsia may engender diseases which defy all restoratives.

THEATRE.—Mr. Wyzeman Marshall closed a successful engagement at Deering Hall, last evening, on which occasion he was greeted by a large audience. The play was the Hunchback, Mr. Marshall taking the part of Master Walter, which he rendered in a better manner than we have ever before seen it done in this city. On this occasion he introduced a pupil of his, Miss M. Seymour, whose personation of Julia was excellent, eliciting the applause of the audience. This young lady has all the elements of a first rate actress, and she will place herself at the head of the profession.—It was her first appearance on any stage, and yet we have seen actresses of long standing who could not come up to her in the personation of this character.

After the fall of the curtain there was a universal call for Marshall. He appeared in front with his pupil Miss Seymour, and in neat terms tendered his acknowledgments for the favors shown him and to his pupil at her first appearance on any stage. He hoped before many months to make his appearance here again, when our country would be at peace and commanding the respect of the world.—He announced that Miss Seymour would make one more appearance in Portland this evening in the character of Lucretia Borgia. The announcement was received with great applause.

This evening the plays will be Lucretia Borgia, and the Irish Emigrant. Next week the Managers will introduce to the Portland people that beautiful and talented young actress Miss Avonia Jones.

SABBATH SCHOOL MEETING.—The schools connected with the Sabbath School Teachers' Association will hold a union meeting in the City Hall, to-morrow, Sunday evening, at 7 o'clock. Addresses by able speakers of our city and from abroad. Singing by the children of the several schools, under the direction of Mr. Gardiner. A collection will be taken in aid of establishing Mission Schools in our city, under the auspices of this association. Will the Superintendents interested give the above notice to their schools; and, also, have the same given by the pastors of their churches.

The children are requested to meet at the Hall this afternoon, at 2 1-2 o'clock, for rehearsal in singing. The committee of arrangements are also requested to meet at the same time and place.

JUVENILE BOOKS.—Henry Hart, Boston, has just published a couple of excellent little books for children. They are entitled, "Little Sermon Talks," and "Little Conquerors," and are a series of the "Hillside Library."

The Massachusetts Sabbath Society has just added to its publications "The Ferryman's Child," with other stories; also "The Red Lion, or Home in Humble Life." Both of these are pleasantly illustrated, and the reader can hardly fail of being impressed with the lessons which these prettily told stories inculcate.

FIRE.—Between 12 and 1 o'clock Thursday night, a dwelling house on Fore Street, at the foot of Hampshire street, owned by R. I. Robison, Esq., and occupied by a family of the name of Stanley, was discovered to be on fire. The discovery was made by their little boy who was almost suffocated by smoke, but who succeeded in arousing his father who slept on a lower floor. The furniture in the house was all saved, and the prompt and efficient action of the fire department, checked the progress of the flames, though the house was badly damaged.

A KEEN EYE.—Police officer Wildes, while patroling his beat on Monday night, discovered three individuals in Sweeney's Court, Brackett street, in consultation. Apparently two of them were females and one was a male, or rather dressed in male costume. The keen eye of the officer detected the disguise of the latter, who proved to be, like the others, a girl of the town. He made her resume her proper garments, and then marched the whole lot to the lockup, when after a proper admonition they were discharged.

AGGRESSIONS OF ROMANISM.—Rev. Dr. Carruthers and Rev. George L. Walker will exchange pulpits Sabbath morning, when the latter will repeat, at the 2nd Parish Church (by request) the discourse he delivered at State Street Church two weeks since, upon the "Aggressions of Romanism," which those who heard it pronounce to be one of the sermons for the times.

ANY person having a house or good tenement to let immediately to a small family, (man and wife) for $150 to $250 rent a year, will please address P. O., Box 1575, stating number and street of the house, and when an interview may be had.

Bonfire on the Mountain.

To the Editor of the Press:

At the request of A. W. Longfellow, Esq., I shall kindle a bonfire on the top of "Bill Merrill" Mountain, the highest land in Hiram, Monday, April 24th, at 8 P. M., to enable the officers of the U. S. Coast Survey to identify the mountain and note its range and bearings. Mr. Longfellow informs me that he will make observations at his residence in Westbrook; also that persons will be stationed at the Observatory on Munjoy, and at Mr. Brown's on Bramhall. I make this announcement that the fire may not be mistaken for that barrel of tar that a rebel in an adjoining town proposes to burn in exultation over the death of President Lincoln.

LLEWELLYN A. WADSWORTH.

Hiram, April 20.

FAST DAY.—The day of our State Fast was more generally and solemnly observed in this city than has been known for a long series of years. There was an almost universal suspension of business, and nearly all the shops in the city, of every description, were closed, while the attendance at the various churches was much larger than has been common heretofore.

The services at the several churches were solemn and impressive, well calculated to correspond with the universal feeling. A quietness and sadness reigned in our city, as much so on Thursday as on Wednesday, when the funeral of President Lincoln took place.

We do not give particular accounts of the services at the several churches, though we have a number before us, for the reason that our space forbids it, and, moreover, there was a beautiful similarity in them. Reading of the Scriptures, prayers, solemn music and words from the Pastors appropriate to the solemn and awful events of the week, encouraging the people to press on in the performance of their duties and to give a hearty support to him upon whom the mantle of government has fallen, were the general features of the observance of our State Fast.

In the afternoon the spacious City Hall was crowded to excess to listen to the discourse of Rev. George Leon Walker, Pastor of State street church, which he had delivered before his people last Sabbath, and by request repeated in the City Hall. It was listened to with the closest attention and the audience was delighted with it, not only for the eulogy upon President Lincoln, but also for the strong lessons drawn from the heart rending event. These lessons we hope to be able to spread before our readers.

The day passed quietly and sadly. We saw none of the dissipating scenes that have, heretofore been usual on such occasions, but every one appeared saddened and subdued at the awful blow that had fallen upon the nation.

FIVE CENTS SAVINGS BANK.—The Trustees of this bank held their annual meeting on Wednesday evening last, and declared a semi-annual dividend of three per cent., the bank assuming the government tax. The semi-annual report of the Treasurer was read, which shows the bank to be in excellent condition—and gradually increasing its capital—notwithstanding the disposition of many the last year to invest in other ways. The principal items were:—The amount on deposit Oct. 1, 1864, $258,734; the amount on deposit, April 1, 1865, $272,969; showing a net increase the last six months of $14,235. About one-third of this is invested in the best mortgages in the city, ($96,694); United States Securities, $98,230; City Bank Stocks, $25,455; State of Maine Bonds, $12,500; Railroad Bonds and Gas stock, $7,850; City and County Scrip, $1,700; Loans on collateral, $33,000; Cash in Bank, $12,799; Profit and loss account, from which the April dividend and government tax is to be paid, $15,276; the number of depositors April 1, was 2786.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—There was a good attendance at Lancaster Hall last evening, and the plays were admirably performed, eliciting the applause of the audience, and provoking great mirth. Murray was capital, and was well sustained by his male actors, while Lizzie Holmes and Amy Stone gained new laurels for their capital rendition of their parts.

This evening, by particular request, the beautiful historic drama of Robert Emmet will be reproduced. It was played with great effect Thursday night, drawing down repeated plaudits from the large audience then assembled. The afterpiece will be Milly, the Maid with a Milking Pail.

SUBSCRIPTION CONCERT.—The Mendelssohn Quintette Club, assisted by Miss Julia E. Houston, will give a concert next Monday evening at City Hall. These are artists of the first class, and their music cannot fail to please the most fastidious. We expect to see a full and fashionable house on the occasion. Tickets may be had at Paine's music store and at the door on the evening of the performance. Those who have subscribed will do well to call and get their tickets.

ALMOST A FIRE.—Wednesday afternoon a spark from a passing locomotive, lodged in the wood pile in the large shed of the Grand Trunk Company, just around Fish Point.—The wood was ignited and smoke issued from the building. The employees of the company rallied and after hard efforts—for it was one of the centre piles that ignited—succeeded in quenching the fire. The shed contained several hundred cords of wood.

CHRYSTY'S Minstrels and Brass Band had a fair house last evening notwithstanding the unfair weather, and the performances were received with much applause. This evening they will make their last appearance with a change of programme. Ye that wish to enjoy a laugh and listen to good music, go and see them at City Hall to-night.

FOR BANGOR.—Steamer Regulator will hereafter make three trips per week to and from Bangor, leaving here at 10 o'clock Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, and Bangor at 6 o'clock in the morning of the same days, touching at all the intermediate ports between the two places.

ON DIT.—We hear that the copartnership existing between Messrs. Felch & Hall, proprietors of the Courier, is about being dissolved, and that Mr. Felch has purchased Mr. Hall's interest in the establishment and will hereafter conduct the paper.

THOSE who wish to preserve their teeth, keep them white and clean, have healthy gums and a pure breath, should use Dr. C. Kimball's I. X. L. Dentifrice. For sale at Crosman & Co.'s, H. T. Cummings', and at the Doctor's office, 135 1 2 Middle street.

ACCIDENT.—We understand that a clerk in the store of H. H. Hay, was seriously injured last evening, by the breaking of a Kerosene lamp, which he accidentally dropped. His hands and face were badly burned.

Mr. S. H. Colesworthy has just received a lot of fine card photographs of President Lincoln, which he is selling at 10 cents each. We would recommend those in want of a good likeness to give him a call.

COUNTERFEITS.—Thursday evening a man calling his name Charles Thompson, was arrested in Boston, for passing counterfeit "fives" on the Eastern Bank, Bangor, at about a dozen different places.

STOCKS, &c., AT AUCTION.—The sale of stocks, bonds, &c., by E. M. Patten, will take place at 11 1 2 o'clock this morning at the Merchants' Exchange.

DANCING.—We would call attention of ladies to the advertisement of Mrs. Dennison, who is about to open another class.

The Supposed Assassinator of Mr. Seward.

The Washington Chronicle gives the following account of the person arrested in that city on suspicion of being the assassin who made the attempt upon the life of Secretary Seward:

A young man, aged twenty-five years, five feet eleven inches high, and with clean shaved face, dainty hands with handcuffs on, is now in as safe a prison as could be found, charged with being the desperate assassin who attempted to murder the Secretary of the State. His name like the color of a chameleon, changes at every new light he is viewed in, and he is now suspected, not only of the awful deed of Friday night last, but also of being the desperado "Thomas," alias the "French Lady," who captured the St. Nicholas in 1861.

This man was arrested on Monday morning, three hours before daylight, by Major Smith, of Gen. Augur's staff, Mr. Morgan of the War Department, and a captain of the volunteer force, who was engaged in searching a house on H street, near Sixth, occupied by relatives of the suspected Suratt. The prisoner knocked at the door for admittance, and was admitted by Mr. Morgan. In his hand he held a pick; his feet were encased in boots of fine French calf. He had on black pants, and grey vest and coat. He appeared surprised at meeting two officers in uniform and Mr. Morgan and said he feared he had mistaken the house. When asked what he called for at that hour, he said he had made arrangements with Mrs. Suratt about the digging of a gutter, and was desirous of knowing where it was to be dug, as he would commence work before the lady was up.

That story would not do. His refined appearance in externals, the white and small hand that held the pick, told a story that was too much at variance with the supposition of his being a man accustomed to manual labor of that kind. So the gentlemen detained him, finished their search of the premises, and conveyed the dainty laborer to the headquarters of General Augur.

As several persons had struggled with and seen the assassin of Mr. Seward, the simple and natural plan of confronting them with the prisoner was, in justice to the prisoner, resorted to ere his full committal. Wm. Bell, the boy who opened the door for the murderous villian on Friday night, and who afterwards saw him again on the stairway, and followed him as far as King and Burchell's, was sent for. The prisoner was placed in a room with many other persons. Wm. Bell was brought into the room, the gas being down. The gas was suddenly turned on, and the boy pointed out the prisoner as the assassin. The other servant did the same, and the accused was sent to ——, where he now is.

If he be the "French Lady," of the St. Nicholas, and Thomas, and Paine, &c., he will easily find matter for meditation and review; but if he be none of these, still the memory of the tenacious ferocity and persistant thirst for blood, which he manifested in his daring attempt to commit the foulest crime known to humanity, may give him some ideal of the feelings of a caged hyena. Baffled in his aim, captured, recognized, he sees the gallows, and has his time to contemplate it.

Literary Enterprise.

Messrs. Hurd & Houghton, a new but enterprising book publishing firm in New York, have undertaken a somewhat novel but capital enterprise, viz.: the republication, under the significant title of "The Library of the Old English Divines," of the writings of Barrow, Bates, Baxter, Bull, Bunyan, Butler, Charnock, Chillingworth, Clarke, Cudworth, Davenant, Donne, Flavel, Hall, Hooker, Howe, Latimer, Leighton, Owen, Pearson, Stillingfleet, Sibbs, South, Taylor, Tillotson, Usher, and Waterland. To these names others may be added, and some of these may be dropped; but they are here mentioned as indicative of the general cast and tone of the "Library." The aim will be, to bring into one solid and comprehensive collection the theological wisdom of England in its elder period. The reprints will be made from the latest and best English editions, and will be accompanied with concise yet full biographical memoirs, and copious indexes. The printing will be done at the "Riverside Press," in its best style, in a handsome 8vo page, with a clear text on a solid tinted paper, most agreeable to the eye. The series will begin with the Sermons of that master spirit, Robert South. This is a noble undertaking and deserves the liberal support of the public.

A Suggestion.

Walking about Portland the other day with a friend who has just returned from an absence of ten years in Europe, we found that the feature which most struck his observing and cultivated eye was the beauty of the many church spires which rise tapering into the air above the forest of trees. The towers of Chestnut Street Church, which, taken in connection with the City Government House, make a fine architectural group, St. Stephen's, State Street, and the new church in Congress Square, one after another came in for their meed of admiration.—But the edifice which most seemed to strike his fancy was St. Luke's. "It is a gem among churches," said he, "and lacks only one thing. Where is the ivy?"

"Oh! that is a grace which only age can bestow. You forget how new our churches are, and how many years it takes to clothe them with that venerable green."

"There you mistake," replied our friend. "It is not a plant of slow growth. Plant ivy here to-day, and in five years these bare walls will be covered with its graceful drapery. Look at those buttresses! They seem made on purpose to be so adorned. It is a fine building as it now stands; give it this decoration, and it would be one of the most beautiful objects in your city."

We confess to being greatly pleased with this suggestion of our travelled friend, and we respectfully recommend it to the consideration of "whom it may concern."

D'Israeli on American Democracy.

Even the tories of England are waking up to some understanding of the character of our American democracy. In a recent speech, D'Israeli, the acknowledged leader of their party, said:

"The democracy of America must not be confounded with the democracy of the Old World. It is not formed of the scum of turbulent cities, neither is it merely a section of an exhausted middle class which speculates in stocks and calls that progress. [Loud cheers and laughter.] It is a territorial democracy, if I may use that epithet without offending the honorable gentleman opposite. [Hear and laughter.] Aristotle who has taught us most of the wise things we know, never said a wiser one than this—that the cultivators of soil are the least inclined to sedition and violent courses. [Hear.] Now, being a territorial democracy, their character has been formed and influenced in a manner by the property with which they are connected, and by the pursuits they follow, and a sense of responsibility arising from a reality of their possessions may much influence their political conduct. [Hear.] And I believe they are very much more inclined to welcome the laborers to their fields, to see around them the product of the earth, and to behold happiness in those households to which they are so much attached, than to plunge into the miseries of a new and terrible war. [Hear, hear."]

Secretary McCulloch has issued the following order:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
Washington, April 17.

It is hereby ordered that, in honor to the memory of our late illustrious Chief Magistrate, all officers and others subject to the orders of the Secretary of the Treasury, wear crape upon the left arm for the period of six months.

☞ The London correspondent of the Toronto Globe says: "I have just seen Mr. Cyrus Field, of Atlantic Telegraph notoriety. He speaks with the utmost confidence of the success of the great enterprise, and every one connected with it appears to share his opinion. He leaves tonight for Suez, where he will be present at the opening of the canal. On the 6th of April a steamer will sail from the Mediterranean right through the Isthmus into the Red Sea—that is, if all goes well."

☞ Mr. H. F. Mann, of Pittsburg, has issued a challenge inviting Sir Wm. Armstrong, of London, to come over to the United States and have a trial of breach-loading rifled guns.

☞ That little paltry kingdom of Portugal has dared insult our flag. It would serve her right to hitch to her with a hawser from one of our steamships and tow her to sea.

BY TELEGRAPH,

TO THE DAILY PRESS.

FROM THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC

Presentation of Captured Flags to General Meade—Feeling of the Army at the Assassination of the President—The Army to Return to the Vicinity of Richmond.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF POTOMAC,
April 17.

An interesting event took place at headquarters this morning. The 6th Corps having taken 18 flags during the recent short campaign, it was arranged that the men who captured them, accompanied by their commands, should march to the vicinity of Gen. Meade's quarters, and there turn in the colors taken from the rebels.

Gen. Meade addressed the heroes in an appropriate speech, in which he thanked them individually for their gallantry, and the entire Corps for the important part they had performed, in being first to break the enemy's line at Petersburg, as well as for their conduct in pursuing and aiding in the utter defeat and capture of the principal army of the Confederacy.

Gen. Meade announced that every man who had taken a flag, should have a furlough for 30 days, and that each one should carry his own flag and present it to the War Department at Washington.

The announcement of the assassination of President Lincoln, and the attempted assassination of Mr. Seward and his son, was received throughout this army with the utmost sorrow. Every man seemed to think it the greatest calamity that possibly could have happened just at this time. Should the assassins be found and turned over to the army, their punishment would be swift and sure, and such as to strike terror into the heart of every sympathizer with treason in the United States.

Citizens living in the country here express their deep regret at the occurrence, and think it the worst thing that could have happened for the Southern people just at this juncture.

The larger part of this army are now concentrated at Burksville Junction, and are taking a short rest. It is thought a movement of the main body of the troops will soon be made towards Petersburg and Richmond, the cavalry and colored divisions of the 25th Corps already having gone in that direction. In fact such a change will have to be made in a few days, as the capacity of the South Side Railroad in its present condition is wholly inadequate to supply so many troops with rations and animals with forage. The latter have suffered much the past week.

Nothing has been heard here from Sherman, but news of Johnston's surrender is daily expected.

From Richmond.

WASHINGTON, April 21.

There has been no public expression of grief by the citizens of Richmond at the calamity which has convulsed the nation, because it is the design of the military authorities that there shall be no assemblages of people in this city for the present. We have heard expressions on all sides condemning and deploring the awful deed in unmeasured terms.

The investigation of the condition of Libby Prison has revealed the fact that the powder magazines were planted there for the purpose of blowing up the prison in the event of the capture of Richmond by Dahlgren. They have been removed some time subsequently.

There is perfect quiet in all the country between Staunton and Richmond.

Gordonsville was evacuated simultaneously with Richmond, the wounded and such of the property as could be got away being removed to Lynchburg, there to fall into the hands of Gen. Grant's troops.

The funeral of President Lincoln was recognized in Richmond by the suspension of government labor not absolutely necessary, and the placing of all the flags at half mast.—Twenty-one minute guns were fired by the war vessels in the harbor.

Health of Mr. Seward and Son.

WASHINGTON, April 21, 9 A. M.

To Hon. E. M. Stanton:—The Secretary of State had a comfortable night, and is doing well. Frederick Seward rested well, but is much exhausted.

(Signed) J. K. BARNES,
Surgeon General.

WASHINGTON, April 21, 9 P. M.

To Hon. E. M. Stanton:—The Secretary of State had no fever to-day, and was less painful. Frederick Seward is stronger, and is not so restless to-night.

(Signed) J. K. BARNES,
Surgeon General.

From Fortress Monroe—Wreck of a Steamer.

FORTRESS MONROE, April 19.

Funeral ceremonies of the Chief Magistrate were solemnized this forenoon, by all the military officers.

The schooner Eliza Neal arrived here this morning, and reports having seen 18th inst., 2 P. M., a steam propeller off Oregon Inlet, 36 miles north of Cape Hatteras, flying her ensign union down. Appearances indicated she had just gone ashore. About 100 men had been taken off the steamer, and boats were still removing troops with which she was loaded. Wind west-south-west, sea smooth, and the steamer seemed to be laying easy.

Funeral Ceremonies at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20.

The funeral services in honor of the late President, in this city yesterday, were the grandest ever witnessed on the Pacific coast. The procession, which was three miles long, contained 15,000 people. Business was suspended, and every house was draped in mourning. The obsequies were observed in every town in the State, and in the principal towns of Nevada. Several arrests were made of parties who expressed an approval of the assassination. They will be dealt with by the authorities. The sad event has caused great interruption of business all over the State.

The body of Mr. Lincoln on its way to Illinois.

BALTIMORE, April 21.

The body of President Lincoln arrived here at 10 o'clock. The procession is now moving. There is an immense turn out of citizens, and a large military escort. The whole population is in the streets. The bells are tolling and minute guns firing. The body is to lay in state until 2 o'clock in the rotunda of the Exchange.

2.15 P. M.—The procession is now escorting the body of President Lincoln from the Exchange to the depot.

Arrival of Mr. Lincoln's Body at Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 21.

The funeral cortege reached here at 8 30. At all places on the route the people were present at the stations, and buildings draped in mourning. Gov. Curtin met the train at the State line at York, where a wreath of flowers was layed on the coffin by the ladies. The remains were escorted by the military to the State House, where they were exposed to view until a late hour. The funeral cortege will leave for Philadelphia at 11 o'clock tomorrow forenoon.

Changes of Military Commanders.

WASHINGTON, April 21.

Gen. Halleck left last evening for Richmond to relieve Gen. Ord in command of the Department, headquarters at Richmond.

Gen. Ord is to relieve Gen. Gilmore in command of the Department of the South, headquarters at Charleston. Gen. Gilmore is to report in person to the Adjutant General for orders. Brig. Gen. Dent, late of Gen. Grant's Staff, is assigned Military Governor of Richmond, relieving Gen. Shepley.

Union Troops entering Richmond.

A correspondent of the N. Y. Evening Post thus speaks of the entrance of our troops into the rebel capital:

Early Monday morning Gen. Weitzel dispatched Major A. H. Stevens, of the 4th Massachusetts cavalry, and Major E. A. Graves, of his staff, with forty cavalry, to investigate the condition of affairs on the roads leading to the rebel works and thence to Richmond. This party had scarcely proceeded far within the rebel lines when they espied a shabby carriage approaching, the driver waving a white flag.

Approaching this vehicle, it was found to contain Mayor Mayo, the head of the Richmond city government; Judge Meredith, of the superior court of Richmond; Judge Lyon, and several other worthies of the rebel persuasion, who announced that they had come out to surrender the city to the competent authority.

The officers immediately rode into the city and proceeding to the city hall, which had been used as the confederate capitol, they raised the flags of companies E and H of the 4th Massachusetts cavalry over it. The colors of the Union were greeted by prolonged cheers and other demonstrations of applause on the part of the civilians and contrabands.

Major Gen. Weitzel and staff arived in the city at about 20 minutes to 8, and were received with joyful acclamations by the troops and the populace; the bands playing and the soldiers cheeing. The coming of the colored troops was the signal for the greatest enthusiasm among the black population of the city. All sorts of demonstrations of pleasure were indulged in, and then a regiment of blacks advanced up Washington street singing,

"Say, darkies, hab you seen de massa
With de muttonfish on his face,
Go down de road some time dis mornin'
Like he jwise to leab the place?"

their delight knew no bounds, and they gave vent to their feelings in all kinds of actions and words. But the most noticeable of their movements was their congregation in large squads on the street corners, where a score or more seemed absorbed in lighting confederate cigars. This was subsequently explained by a colored barber in this wise: "Last week any colored man found smoking on the street was punished with fifteen lashes, and now dat you all's come, me can smoke as much as me please."

In coming through the fortifications around Richmond our soldiers were obliged to march in single file to avoid the rebel torpedoes, thickly planted everywhere. A thin stick was placed over each torpedo, and a piece of red muslin attached to it which the rebs could not stop to remove.

PIANO FORTES! PIANO FORTES!
NEW YORK PIANO FORTE CO.,
394 Hudson Street, N. Y.,
We would call the attention of the public to the superior quality of these instruments. They are equal to steinways', Chickerings', or those of any other noted manufacturers in this country or Europe.
The company being composed of twenty of the best workmen that could be found in the first class manufactories in New York, principally in Mr. Steinway's Factory, every part of their instruments is done in the very best manner, and this enables the company to furnish Piano, which if equalled can not be surpassed for duality and power of tone, easiness of action and beauty.
Judges of Pianos and purchasers are requested to call at 112 Middle st, Portland, Maine, any time during the day or evening, where two Pianos are for sale, and judge for themselves.
A Good Bargain is warranted.

JUMP-SEAT CARRIAGE!
The attention of the public is respectfully called to my NEW STYLE PATENT JUMP-SEAT CARRIAGE—as neat for two or four passengers—invented and patented by me.
I hereby certify, that I have used, the past season, the Kimball Jump-Seat Carriage, on which Mr. C. P. Kimball obtained Letters Patent on the 15th of Nov. 1864. I take great pleasure in saying to all persons desiring a good, genteel and serviceable Family Carriage, that, in my opinion, the Kimball Jump-Seat far surpasses any thing of the kind ever before invented—being very genteel in style, as light and well adapted for one or two persons as any single Carriage, yet roomy and comfortable for four full grown persons—is also one of the easiest riding Carriages I have ever seen, either with two or four person. The seats are so constructed that even a child can shift them, and so well proportioned and made that they do not get out of repair.
I advise all to examine before purchasing any other kind of Family Carriage.

JOHN H. PIERCE, Boston.
This is not a stock offered at the greatly inflated prices, and sold at its nominal par value, by which reduction each stockholder is made personally liable: but is sold at its actual par value and cost.
Two Wells now going down, and more Wells to go down soon.
612½ acres of the best oil land which the stockholders get for the low price of $150,000, with $30,000 to work it with, being about three times the amount of land stockholders generally get in Companies where the Capital is fixed at $500,000. We would particularly call the attention of parties wishing to invest in this fact, as with very little success we shall be able to pay at least three or four per cent. a month, and that within sixty days from the time we close our subscribe.
We have already engaged an engine, now ON THE LAND, to go to work with. By this arrangement we shall save at least thirty days, which it would take to get out there.
In putting this stock upon the market, the officers promise to use all their energy, and confidently expect to make it the best oil stock in the market.
The property of this Company is situated on Oil Creek, Crawford County, Pennsylvania, and Allegany County, New York. The property on Oil Creek is very valuable, and from this property alone the Company can earn large dividends. The Company will, as quick as the funds of the Company will admit, sink several wells on this property.
The property in Allegany County, New York, is also very valuable, being situated near the celebrated "Indian Spring," so called, and consists of 552½ acres, which is rising in value, and can be released at a large advance from what it will cost this Company.
Since the above was written, the "Indian Spring Oil Company" have received letters stating that the Moore Well is now flowing Oil, which is of the finest lubricating quality, and will sell for $70 per barrel in this market.
This new field of oil will largely advance the price of land in this vicinity, and as this Company has 552½ acres adjoining the "Indian Spring Company," the officers feel the fullest confidence in placing this stock upon the market, and expect large and regular dividends.
Subscription Books for signatures will be open Monday, March 6, 1865, at the office of F. W. HATCH, Treasurer, 49 Washington street, and at LOMBARD & COKE, 89 State street.
Prospectus to be had, and further information given on application to the Treasurer, or
